Prisma Health Midlands Wound Healing and Hyperbaric Oxygen Center

Model 3600H Hyperbaric Chamber

Prisma Health Midlands has plans to develop, build and optimize a specialized wound healing and hyperbaric oxygen center to advance current wound treatment in the Columbia area. This investment would expand access to hyperbaric treatments at two to three times the current access rate, reducing diabetic limb amputations and the loss of lives.

The Prisma Health Midlands Foundation Board of Directors, in collaboration with Prisma Health Midlands Foundation, is leading a $2 million capital campaign to help fund this new center.

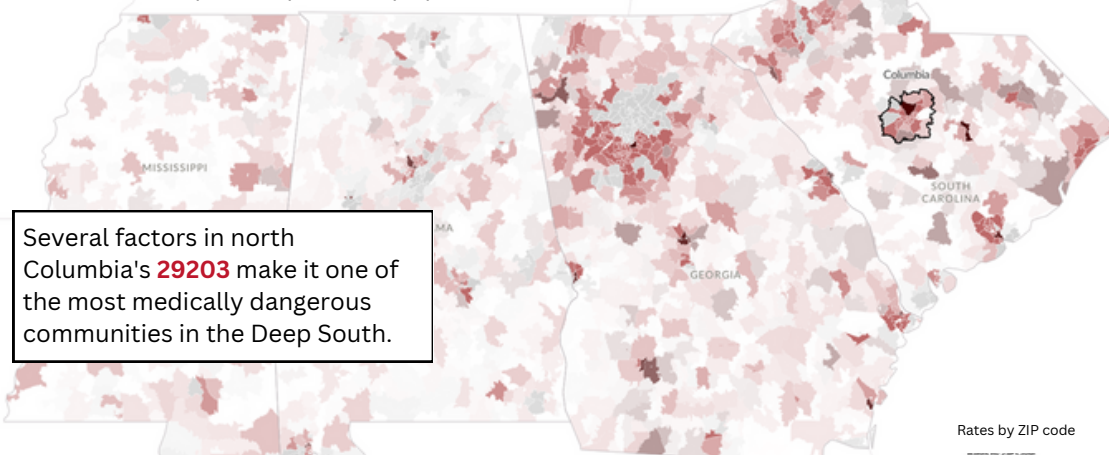

Between 52% and 80% of diabetic patients die within five years of a below-the-knee amputation. Improving a patient's access to treatment is pivotal in a patient's quality of life and lifespan after undergoing treatment.

Columbia's amputation rate is 20 TIMES higher than the national average.

Diabetic Amputation Rates

Data shown represents the number of people who have received diabetic related amputations per 10,000 people in each ZIP code

Several factors in north Columbia's 29203 make it one of the most medically dangerous communities in the Deep South.

Rates by ZIP code

"Diabetic patients don't mount the type of immune response that a nondiabetic does. They don't fight infection as well. And they may not even know they have a wound until something is going very wrong."
